SUMMARY

Sophie Park, Ph.D. is a Director at the Berkeley Research Group and an economist with more than 20 years of experience spanning transfer pricing, antitrust, securities litigation consulting, academic teaching, and economic research. She advises multinational companies and government agencies on complex transfer pricing matters, with deep expertise in controversy support, litigation, audits, appeals, and advance pricing agreement processes across industries including mortgage lending, medical devices, pharmaceuticals, software, and consumer goods.

In her Transfer Pricing career, Dr. Park has supported numerous clients in resolving high-profile transfer pricing disputes and currently serves as an expert in active litigation matters. Her experience includes:

- Leading teams supporting expert witnesses in cases involving IP valuation and transfer pricing disputes, including matters resolved prior to trial.
- Supporting experts across litigation cycles—expert report drafting, deposition preparation, and trial testimony—in industries such as textiles, chemicals, health insurance, and consumer goods.
- Conducting economic analyses for audits, appeals, APA negotiations, and tax planning initiatives.
- Advising clients on operational transfer pricing, M&A-related pricing questions, and compliance strategies.

Before specializing in transfer pricing, Dr. Park worked in securities and antitrust litigation consulting, performing advanced empirical and econometric analyses using large transactional datasets and statistical software. She holds a SAS certification and has extensive experience with regression-based modelling and quantitative economic analysis.

Dr. Park previously taught undergraduate courses in Microeconomic Theory, Statistics for Economists, and experiential learning programs involving corporate internships, delivering lectures, leading small-group sessions, and advising students individually.
